

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An switching system for routing a call setup request received from a subscriber device to a desired network among multiple networks having two or more different routing methods, based on information included in the call setup request.

